Biography of the directors

Germain and Robin Aguesse are two brothers from the North of France. In 2018, they decided to turn their common passion for cinema into a profession in its own right. That same year, they wrote and directed their first short film entitled "The last Vermouth". This horrific comedy met with a certain success and won 5 prizes for a dozen selections, including a "Jury's Prize", a "Best Film" and a "Public Award". It is now available on Youtube where it has accumulated nearly 60,000 views.

Following this first experience, they will start writing their second short film in 2019: "ARCA". An anticipation film on the border between reality and science-fiction which was finalised in 2022. It now has three selections and two festival awards: "Best Directors Award" and "Best Sci-Fi". In the same year, they made a 90-minute documentary entitled « We only live once », focusing on the lives of four women who lived through the World War II.
